

ABSTRACT:

A method of obtaining technical support for a data-processing device, comprising initiating a support session during which device-specific data is conveyed
5 from the device to a support provider to assist the support provider in responding to a support query, and polling the support provider for a response to the query, on a repeated and automated basis, until a response becomes available or the support session is terminated.